Local Dealership Owner First Woman Inducted into Hall of Fame

Out of more than 3,500 dealers in the nation, Ford Motor Company honored Woody Anderson Ford owner Cathy A. Stender with induction into the company's Top Dealer Hall of Fame. Stender became the first female member of the prestigious group of only 31 dealers in early March at a private reception with company executives, fellow dealers, and the Ford family.

"To qualify the honoree must be regarded as a true heroine by Ford Motor Company, loved by their customers, revered by their employees, fixtures in their communities, and respected by their fellow dealers," according to Ford Motor Company Vice President Andrew Frick. "They must also be longtime dealers that are consistently top performers year in and year out."

Stender began her leadership tenure at the family business in 2003, and since then, the dealership has grown to become one of the largest in the country. The businesswoman leans on her psychology background to better understand her community's needs and is always looking for ways to push the bounds and innovate.

"Cathy's impact on our community continues to be noteworthy and inspirational," said Tommy Battle, City of Huntsville Mayor. "For years, her passion and desire to improve our City have exceeded the walls of her dealership with every endeavor she undertakes."

Ford Motor Company took notice of Stender's passion as well, tapping her to serve on the influential Ford Product Committee, CEM Advisory Board, and FDAF Board. Stender continues to serve in those roles as she helps the company develop innovative products like the Mach-E and reimagine classics such as the beloved Bronco.

Her compassion and dedication over 17 years have fueled the dealership's growth. During that time period, Stender oversaw the company's expansion into Madison with the Hughes Road facility, acquisition of the Ford dealership in Fayetteville, and the major renovation and addition of the 150,000+ square foot dealership on Jordan Lane.

"There is never a perfect time to expand. In my view, if you focus on taking care of the customer and don't make it about the economy, you become successful in the endeavor," said Stender during a 2008 interview with the Huntsville Times.

Rep. Hall Recipient of Persistence Service Award

"Effective candidates and leaders are the result of hard work, training, mentoring, and experience. We help candidates get started and continue to grow and learn" ...

These words are descriptive of both the goals of political action committee, i.e. Persistence PAC, and the work of the recipient of their first "Persistence Service Award" award to State Representative Laura Hall.

Representative Hall brought to her political life and work the experience of a long career in education, sharpening the young minds of our youth.

She is a person of deep religious faith, committed to equal justice, fairness and equality of opportunity, and governmental service to all the citizens of the state of Alabama.

Rep. Hall has served on many committees with the greatest degree of strength and integrity addressing such issues as health in general, AIDS specifically, funding for individuals starting businesses and the rights of incarcerated and previously incarcerated individuals, just a few of the causes she has championed.

Representative Hall epitomizes and reflects the lofty principles and goals of Persistence PAC which are aimed at giving to our state the best in political leadership.

Hall is a shining example of that goal and is indeed a model for those entering that field to emulate. The current minority whip of the Alabama State House of Representatives, Anthony Daniels, frequently lauds her as his mentor.

Representative Hall is indeed a shining and guiding light in our community, local, statewide and beyond.

The award was presented to her by congresswoman Terri Sewell, who stood in for former Senator Doug Jones. Senator Jones was unable to come due to commitments in Washington D.C. centered around the confirmation of Ketanji Brown Jackson as the first Black female judge for the United States Supreme Court.

Washington in One Minute

Here are the happenings in Washington, D.C., this week:

1. ON THE FLOOR. The House and Senate are in session this week before adjourning for the 2-week Spring Recess. On Monday, the Senate Judiciary Committee was expected to send the Supreme Court nomination of Judge Ketanji Brown Jackson to the Senate floor, which was expected to vote on the nomination this week. The House and Senate may also take up a $10 billion FY2022 supplemental COVID spending bill sought by the White House, which would include $1 billion to support global vaccinations and $750 million for research and development of new vaccines and treatments. The House will take up a resolution to hold former Trump White House aides Peter Navarro (Director of Trade and Manufacturing Policy) and Daniel Scavino (Deputy Chief of Staff) in contempt of Congress for refusal to comply with subpoenas issued by the Select Committee to Investigate the January 6th Attack on the United States Capitol. The Senate is expected to vote on a motion to formally begin negotiations with the House on USICA, a high-profile technology and manufacturing initiative that has strong support from Majority Leader Chuck Schumer and Corporate America.

2. THE WHITE HOUSE. Last Thursday, President Biden announced that he would release 1 million barrels of oil per day for the next six months (over 180 million barrels) from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve. He also called on Congress to impose fees on oil and gas companies on unused wells on federal land and the 12 million acres of public land they're leasing without production. Last Wednesday, the Biden Administration launched its COVID.gov website to help people get access to COVID-19 information, including vaccines, tests, treatments, and masks, as well as get the latest updates on COVID-19 in their area. The website will also provide a new "Test-to-Treat" locator that will help people access pharmacies and community health centers across the nation where people can get tested for COVID-19 and receive appropriate treatments if they need them. On Wednesday, the President addressed attendees at the 2022 North America's Building Trades Unions (NABTU) Legislative Conference at the Washington Hilton.

3. FEDERAL MASK MANDATE. Last Tuesday, 21 states (AL, AK, AZ, AR, FL, GA, ID, IN, KS, KY, LA, MS, MO, MT, NE, OH, OK, SC, UT, VA, and WV) sued the Biden Administration to end the federal mask mandate for planes, trains, buses, and transit hubs that was recently extended by the Transportation Security Administration through April 18, 2022. Persistent rumors abound in Washington that the Biden Administration will not renew the mask mandate when it expires on

April 18, especially in view of the decision by the Administration to end the "Title 42" COVID public health emergency declaration at the U.S. border on May 23, which has since March 2020 allowed U.S. border officials to expel 1.7 million migrants without allowing them to apply for asylum due to the COVID pandemic (which was the topic of a House Homeland Security subcommittee hearing on Wednesday, April 6).

4. SUPREME COURT. On Monday, the Supreme Court was slated to issue opinions from its current docket. Last week, the Navy announced that it would name a ship in honor of the late Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg. The U.S.N.S. Ruth Bader Ginsburg (T-AO 212), which has not yet been constructed, will be a John Lewis-class replenishment oiler ship designed to carry fuel to the Navy's operating carrier strike groups.

I needed to do on a daily basis or weekly basis to keep them out. When you are dealing with weeds you have to stay on top of things or they will get out of control.

Matthew 13:27-28 says, "Sir, didn't you sow good seed in your field? Where did the weeds come from? An enemy did this, he replied."

You know, the other day I was pulling up weeds that had grown in my yard and my plant bed. The reason that they had grown up was because I neglected them and allowed them to grow. You see, I didn't do what to be pulled up and eliminated from our lives. If we don't, we won't have the abundant life, filled with the beauty and peace that God wants us to have.

Since I've pulled the weeds out of my plant bed, everything is beautiful. You see, by getting the weeds out of our lives, we can eliminate the things that don't bring us joy or give us peace and remember peace is power Stay encouraged, my brothers and sisters, and make sure you purchase a copy of my book, "A CHAMPION GAME PLAN FOR LIFE" at amazon.com

A&M President Supports Resolution Condemning Threats to HBCUs

The U.S. House of Representatives recently passed a resolution (H. Con. Res. 70) condemning the recent HBCU bomb threats, and a letter of support by Alabama A&M University (AAMU) President Daniel K. Wims has been included in the congressional record.

Congresswoman Alma Adams (D-NC-12), Congressman French Hill (R-AR-02), Chairman Robert C. “Bobby” Scott (D-VA-03), and the Congressional Bipartisan HBCU Caucus celebrated the passage of H. Con. Res. 70, a resolution condemning threats of violence against historically Black colleges and universities (“HBCUs”) and reaffirming support for HBCUs and their students.

“I’m proud of the House for passing H. Con. Res. 70, a resolution that condemns the despicable, cowardly bomb threats to Historically Black Colleges and Universities on multiple days this year,” said Congresswoman Alma Adams, founder and co-chair of the Congressional Bipartisan HBCU Caucus.

“These threats were hate crimes. They were acts of terror. As a proud HBCU alumnae and professor, I know HBCUs can overcome any challenge, but those challenges shouldn’t include violence. Terrorism and racism have no place on college campuses – or anywhere else.”

Dr. Adams received AAMU’s honorary Doctor of Public Service diploma during the Spring 2021 commencement program in Huntsville, where she also delivered the address to graduates.

“Historically Black Colleges and Universities are an integral part of our nation’s education system and our history. Despicable threats of violence, including the string of bomb threats targeting HBCUs earlier this year, are completely unacceptable,” said Rep. Terri Sewell (D-AL-07), vice chair of the HBCU Caucus. “As Vice Chair of the Congressional HBCU Caucus whose district is home to some of the most prominent HBCUs in the nation, I condemn these threats in the strongest terms. I applaud my colleague, Congresswoman Adams, for introducing this resolution which makes clear that the United States Congress is committed to fostering safe environments at HBCUs so that our students can thrive without fear of violence and terror.”

“We wholeheartedly support the resolution led by you and Congressman French Hill outright condemning these persistent acts of domestic terrorism,” wrote AAMU President Wims to Congresswoman Adams on February 7.

“Our HBCUs have proven their merit by making the American Dream accessible to thousands. We must do everything in our power to ensure their continued existence.”

“Passing this resolution was essential as far as UNCF (United Negro College Fund) is concerned,” said Dr. Michael L. Lomax, president/CEO of UNCF. “The disruption, anguish, and acts of terror that more than one-third of all HBCUs have experienced in January and February of this year are unacceptable. While we are glad Rep. Adams and others were able to pass this resolution in an overwhelmingly bipartisan manner, we are still waiting for the perpetrators of these hate crimes to be brought to justice.”

“We thank Congresswoman Adams for leading the way and shepherding H. Con. Res. 70, a resolution that condemns the recent terroristic threats to HBCUs across the county,” said Harry L. Williams, president and CEO of the AAMU-affiliated Thurgood Marshall College Fund (TMCf). “This resolution symbolizes Congress saying with one voice that hatred and threats of violence will not be tolerated. We continue to anticipate and expect that the Justice Department will prosecute the individuals responsible for these heinous acts to the fullest extent of their authority and we look forward to the swift conclusion of this matter.”

The Other Side of Will Smith’s Slap

Will Smith’s infamous slap of Chris Rock at the 2022 Academy Awards was for many another case of black-on-black crime - this one with 16.6 million witnesses.

Rock joked about Jada Pinkett Smith’s shaved head from her alopecia disease; husband Will then stormed the stage and slapped Rock.

Such commentators as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Richard Williams slapped back at Will Smith’s action and justifiably so.

But now I ask: Can any object lessons emerge from that scenario? Yes. Smith finally took it to the TOP as he:

- Targeted his problem,
- Owned his problem, and then
- Proceeded to take action.

Summarily, this 2022 Best Actor award winner became a good-to-bad-to-good role model.

How? Smith targeted, owned his misdeed, and then proceeded via Instagram, “Violence in all of its forms is poisonous and destructive. My behavior at last night’s Academy Awards was unacceptable and inexcusable.

“I would like to publicly apologize to you, Chris. I was out of line and I was wrong. . . . There is no place for violence in a world of love and kindness.”

Here, Smith modeled three valuable lessons:

- 1) Our biggest defeats can typically follow our biggest victories. “I deeply regret that my behavior has stained what has been an otherwise gorgeous journey for all of us,” Smith concluded.
- 2) Therefore, you and I must watch carefully those highest moments of celebrity and achievement - that’s usually when we relax and let our guard down. And fall.
- 3) Follow this TOP model: Once we become aware of our own misdoings we should own them, admit them, and apologize to the offended parties; then proceed to take action against repeating them.

Only then can we rise from possible or momentary “celebrity” or limelight up to a level of role model that others can follow.

The next day following the slap, we see here that Smith apologized to Rock, the Academy, and the Williams family, whose patriarch he portrayed in “King Richard.”

1 John 1:9 advises, “If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.”

REV. MICHAEL RICE

The Jilted Lover

Hosea 11:8-9; Romans 2:4

Novels, plays, movies, and television shows; each of these venues have carried stories of jilted lovers. Some have turned out tragically and others tearfully. Regardless of how the story ends, it is not an experience that anyone in their right mind would want to experience.

The pain of betrayal hits the heart in places that are deep and leaves invisible scar tissue that although unseen, it certainly is not unfelt. All of these examples are “human” examples. Centuries ago God portrayed Himself as a jilted lover through the prophet Hosea. His response was rather unusual compared to what we as humans are used to reading and/or watching. There were no messy scenes of violence but there were the mournful sounds of a broken heart. Despite Israel’s continued chasing after Baal, God’s word to them was “How can I give you up?”

God did not try to hide His hurting heart. He said that His heart was “torn within.” But instead of

spewing out anger and wrath, He spoke about flowing compassion and a refusal to unleash His anger and destroy Israel. Mercy mounted up and damned up the anger that could have and should have flowed. How was God able to do that? I’ll let Him answer; For I am God, and not man. That’s good news!

That is why Paul urged his readers to not show contempt for this kind of forbearance and patience because it is meant to lead to repentance.

Attorney Announces Run for District Court Judge

Kimberly Rucker is a local attorney currently seeking the position of District Court Judge because she believes "everyone in Madison County should be ensured equality and justice under the law, whether they are White or Black, rich or poor, first generation or fifth generation."

With a family history deeply shaped by life in the segregated South, Rucker knows intimately the struggle for equal protection and justice under the law.

Rucker shares in Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s optimistic vision that while "the arc of the moral universe is long" it does "bend toward justice," and she aims to bring an objective, impartial voice to the District Court bench.

Rucker has deep roots in Alabama, having attended Alabama State University and the University of Alabama School of Law before settling in Huntsville to begin practicing law in 2008.

She spent 10 years practicing civil, business, labor, and employment litigation at Wilmer & Lee, P.A., becoming the first African American shareholder in 2015.

For the last four years, Rucker has served as the Chief Compliance Officer for Thrive Alabama, an organization that provides high quality, affordable healthcare to people in North Alabama.

The Latest Trends for a Successful Spring Garden

(BPT) - Interest in gardening continues to blossom as more people decide to exercise their green thumb and make the most of their outdoor spaces. Whether it's a quaint balcony, large backyard garden or front yard landscaping, gardening opportunities are bountiful.

With a little creativity and some expert insight, anyone can be a successful gardener. The team at Ball Horticultural Company shares simple tips and the top trends for 2022 to inspire every type of gardener.

Low maintenance, high impact. Do you want a magazine-worthy landscape but don't want to spend every day tending to plants? The trick is to strategically select eye-catching flowers that are easy to care for.

There are many plants that offer beautiful blooms with surprisingly little work. Beacon Impatiens are the ideal plant for flowerbeds with partial sun, rewarding you with ample, long-lasting color for the shade.

Add Megawatt Begonias in pots and transition spaces - this bigger-than-life hybrid provides rich color and glossy foliage with little care. For sunny spots, you can't go wrong with low-maintenance E3 Easy Wave Petunias. This spreading petunia comes in a variety of hues, adding sweeping color that will be the envy of the neighborhood.

Fun and flavorful foods. As the sustainability movement continues, more people are interested in growing their own food. Whether it's a small herb garden or a large vegetable plot, having homegrown food at your fingertips can help you eat healthier and fresher.

Many vegetables and herbs do as well in containers as they do in the ground, so if you're short on space, you can still succeed with growing vegetables as long as you can give your plants a sunny spot and adequate water. An insider tip is to skip seeds and buy garden-ready plants that are already established, such as Burpee vegetables and herbs. This helps support successful growing and faster harvests.

Tomatoes are a must for any vegetable grower. But what if you don't have an outdoor growing space? No garden, no problem with the Kitchen Minis collection of indoor potted vegetables. Look for Siam Tomato, which gives you several weeks of cherry-sized fruit for your fresh eating and recipes. Enjoy it on a sunny windowsill indoors or next to your other easy-access countertop herbs.

Pollinator gardens. Pollination is essential for plants to flourish, and according to the U.S. Forest Service, pollinators are responsible for assisting over 80% of the world's flowering plants to reproduce. This includes hard-working insects like butterflies, bees and birds. Because of their essential work, everyone can enjoy plants that delight the eyes and tasty foods that tantalize the taste buds.

Some pollinator populations are diminishing, so people are taking action by planting pollinator-friendly gardens. For example, if you want butterfly bliss in your garden, choose Chrysalis Buddleia. Known as Butterfly Bush, this plant has an abundance of flowers but grows in a manageable size - perfect for a small hanging basket. Add in a few Shamrock Lantana, whose blooms are an attractive, soft landing pad, and you'll be creating a pollinator paradise.

First impressions. After spending the last few years close to home, people are taking exceptional pride in their property by prioritizing curb appeal. Friendly yellows and vivid purples are on trend and broadly appealing, making your home stand out on the block.

For a sunny show all season long, plant Bee's Knees Petunias. The intense yellow color of each big bloom adds brightness to your landscaping. Juxtapose the yellow with Jolt Purple Dianthus, adding a vivid magenta shade that instantly adds personality.

Curb appeal can come from more than just flowering plants, of course. For visual interest in a fruiting plant, check out Pepper Candy Cane Chocolate Cherry. With variegated foliage and uniquely striped fruit that changes from green to chocolate and cherry red, this is a treat for the eyes and the stomach.

No matter the size of your garden space or the time you can put into your plants, there's something for everyone in the top gardening trends of the year.

In addition to offering Huntsville Transit patrons an easier way to get around the citizens by paying for Token Transit via a smartphone app, there's more on the scene, notes Mayor Tommy Battle and Quisha Bryant, public transit director.

Some time in 2024, Huntsvillians can expect the completion of a new Huntsville Transit transfer station.

The improvements will help the city boost the transit system, since bulk fare packages will be available for schools, universities and large employers in need of reliable transportation for students and employees.
