Extension Wants Help with 'Grassroots Survey 2019'

Each year the Alabama Cooperative Extension System conducts its "Grassroots Survey" to obtain information from stakeholders like you across the state.

The Grassroots Survey allows the organization to identify key issues that impact every county in Alabama. Your input is invaluable and it's a major factor in deciding what type of resources to develop for consumers. Survey results are compiled and reviewed by Alabama Extension administrators, program developers called specialists, regional agents, and other key staff. The information is then used to develop outreach programs and other print and digital resources that address critical needs whether in rural, urban or suburban communities.

You will find the Survey online at <http://www.aces.edu/grassroots>. It takes about 10 minutes to complete and you may skip any questions you do not want to answer.

Please contact your county

Extension office if you have questions. Just click on the name of the county nearest you at <https://ssl.acesag.auburn.edu/directory-new/>.

If you are completing a hard copy of the Survey, please drop it off at your county Extension office. A hard copy may be downloaded at:

3 Ways to Shape up for Summer, Page 8

From the Editor

Ahhh, My Oldest Sister, Ola!

Just recently, my oldest sister, Ola, passed away. She was the oldest daughter of my parents' 13 children. I am the youngest. I thanks God for her for many reasons. She was the first daughter to leave home for the big city. Yes, both Philadelphia and Mobile were big cities for those of us who grew up in Monroeville.

She did not finish high school because she had to work on the farm. She left home with her husband and moved to Philadelphia and later to Mobile. As youth, we could not wait for summer to come because we were sure to be able to go to her 'big' comfortable house in Mobile for a week or two during the summer. She showed us the ropes. Her home on Hercules Street was just a block from Davis Avenue, a mecca of Black businesses from side to side and block to block. There were diverse shops, including restaurants, ice cream shops, old counter style drug stores, shoe and dress shops. At night, the children were not allowed on Davis Avenue on feet. When we drove through with adults, we heard the sounds of Ole School music banging from live bands and jukeboxes. It was as if we were driving through New York City. The big city lights and sounds were both intimidating and exciting.

By car in Mobile we would get What-A-Burgers, ice cream cones, Krispy Kreme doughnuts, fried fish and chicken plates. Fresh seafood was for sure. A special evening included a trip to Daphne to the Edgewater Beach that my Aunt Sarah Crandall owned. Ahhh! There was no place like MOBILE! Even after we grew up, we would always go to Ola's house in Mobile. It was a place of refuge, where we could always find delectable dishes, a warm bedroom in the winter and cool spaces in the summer. When the adults parked the cars in her yard, we couldn't wait to get out and go in to see what Ola had on the stove. She liked junk foods that we didn't have at home. She could make some of the best powdered sugar wedding cookies, cheese straws and gumbo!

She worked for four generations for one family of doctors and lawyers. They loved Ola and accepted her as part of their families. The children grew up and married, reaching back to take her along. She cleaned their homes, cooked, ironed and babysat the children. She wore a starched, white dress each day with white stocking and shoes. She was a model big sister. Whatever job she had, she took pride in it and was beloved by her employers.

Although Ola never finished high school, upon meeting her, you were impressed with her ability to talk about almost anything. That was because she worked around educated people, listened intently and appreciated a good quality of life in spite of her background. When in Mobile, we worked hard and played hard. She loved a spotless home, so we were forever scrubbing the hard wood floors and bathtubs. The work was worth the play.

Losing a loved one is almost always difficult. However, when you have nothing but sweet, sweet memories to sustain you, it makes the process easier to bear. And, with time, we move forward, knowing she's in a better place.

Thanks for the love shown, especially your precious thoughts and prayers. It's wonderful knowing that so many of you care. God's knows what's best for each of us. Rest in love, my dear Ola. Until next week ...

Washington in One Minute

Here are the top issues in Washington, D.C., for this week:

1. The House and Senate are in session this week, with votes postponed until Tuesday. The House will finish work on the first appropriations “mini-bus” package of four FY2020 appropriations bills (Defense, Energy & Water, Labor/HHS, and State/Foreign Operations) and then start work on mini-bus #2, which contains the FY2020 Commerce/Justice/Science; Agriculture; Interior; Military Construction/Veterans Affairs; and Transportation/HUD appropriations bills – completing work on 9 of the 12 annual appropriations bills. Last week, GOP congressmen forced roll call votes on dozens of amendments to the first mini-bus, which kept the House in session until 4:00 a.m. on Friday. More of these stalling tactics are expected this week as the GOP tries to pressure the House Democratic Leadership to bring up legislation providing additional border funding. The Senate this week is expected to have enough votes to block an $8 billion arms sale to Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates, which President Trump had announced using emergency powers to bypass congressional review of the sale.

2. On Tuesday, President Trump formally kicked off his 2020 presidential campaign at a rally in Orlando, Fla., and then traveled to Miami. On Wednesday, he presented the Presidential Medal of Freedom to economist Arthur Laffer (who provided advice to the 2016 Trump Campaign). On Thursday, he hosted a meeting at the White House with Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau to discuss implementation of the proposed US/Mexico/Canada trade agreement and then that evening the President and Mrs. Trump hosted members of Congress and their families at the annual congressional picnic on the South Lawn of the White House.

3. On Monday, the U.S. Supreme Court began issuing its final 24 case rulings over the final 2 weeks of its 2018-2019 term, which will include decisions on whether the U.S. Census may include a citizenship question on the 2020 national census and if the court will strike down congressional districts in North Carolina and Maryland based solely on charges of partisan gerrymandering.

4. Congressional committees had a busy week. Highlights include a Wednesday House Ways and Means Committee hearing on the Trump Administration’s China, EU, UK, Mexico, and Canada trade policies; a 2nd hearing by the House Aviation Subcommittee (also on Wednesday) on the grounded Boeing 737-Max aircraft featuring testimony from airlines, pilots and flight attendants (including “Miracle on the Hudson” pilot “Sully” Sullenberger); a House Middle East Subcommittee hearing on Iran on Wednesday; a Thursday House Consumer Protection Subcommittee hearing on the proposed roll back of car and light truck fuel economy standards; and a Tuesday Senate Finance Committee hearing on the proposed US/Mexico/Canada free trade agreement.

5. Peter Oppenheim, the assistant secretary for legislation and congressional affairs at the Education Department, is returning to the Capitol Hill. He starts today as the Senate HELP committee’s general counsel. Mr. Oppenheim previously served as the education policy director and counsel for Senator Lamar Alexander (R-TN) on the committee.

6. The Hill newspaper on Monday contained an analysis of a recent Public Opinion Strategies election report showing the Republican party is dominated by a single demographic: non-college educated white men – of whom 66% voted for GOP candidates in the 2018 midterm elections – while losing white voters with a college education by 8% and women voters by 19%. The report also found that in 2012, 40% of Republicans were college-educated whites, while in 2018 that number had fallen to just 29%.

The Hill reported that the key swing voters for 2020 are the 6 million mostly white, working class men who voted for President Obama in 2012 and then switched to President Trump in 2016 - whose number one issue is opposition to free trade.

Remembering Michael Jackson - and his Secret

Read 2 Corinthians 12:7-10

by tim allston

June 25th marks the 10th anniversary of Jackson's death.

Q: What was the King of Pop's enduring legacy . . . for recovering ego-holics?

- More than his estimated 350 million record sales and trademark singing/dancing pyrotechnics ...
- Even more featured publicly than his red leather jacket, shimmering white socks, patent leather Florsheim size 9 ½ loafers or black fedora hat ...
- And perhaps even unbeknownst to this $236 million-valued cultural/entertainment icon

A: It will be Jackson's left-handed, white rhinestone-studded modified golf glove, masking his secret.

Until now.

Ego-holism recovering step #5 reveals that some of our greatest victories ("lemonade") come directly from our responses to our most sobering defeats or setbacks ("lemons").

From actress/friend Cicely Tyson:

www.thehits.co.nz, 8-20-2017: "Tyson revealed to a CNN editor that she was there when the glove was being made and explains that the reason for the glove was more than just hearsay!

"Jackson's dermatologist (Dr. Arnie Klein) confirmed that The gloved one was indeed suffering from a serious case of Vitiligo and he was getting breakouts on his hand and face, areas that were difficult to treat.

"Geeeee, talk about turning a negative into a positive!"

FYI: December 2009 witnessed the glove being auction-purchased for $420,000!

Getting a Hand from the Apostle Paul

Rather than deny his "thorn in the flesh," Paul instead thanked God, which he credited with converting his infirmity into a strength (2 Cor. 12:7-10).

As with Michael Jackson's "lemon," God and you can team up and create a "lemonade blessing," using your bitter lemon.

Squeeze it today.

Millennial Thought

by Josh Alex Baker

“The Day Is Only Thursday!”

Self-awareness is power. Over the span of my life, one of the greatest incumbrances I have faced is the false dilemma.

A false dilemma is a logical fallacy. Sounds great to the ear but is otherwise erroneous. A false dilemma presents that there are only two, rigid options with no flexibility in between.

For example, “Drink this bottle of water” or “immediately pass out in the sun.” As you can imagine, quite a few steps exist between each point of this spectrum. I believe that one of the greatest false dilemmas we succumb to is do it all at once or do nothing at all. I have found that when I have been most overwhelmed, I was presenting myself this dilemma. In as much as you can, don’t panic.

Plan. Make a list. It might seem trivial, but it can make a world of difference. Instead of allowing every obligation to pounce through your brain like a free-radical, put it down on paper.

Quantify your workload. You might find that what feels like end-of-the-world-responsibilities are actually just seven agenda items. Being able to see them tangibly makes the task so much more accessible. I will never forget a conversation with my aunt that changed my life. As I’m unloading what seems to be an endless list of obligations due before the beginning of the next work week, she reminds me that the day is only Thursday. Such simple reassurance was so transformative. It allowed me to breathe. It allowed me to pace. It allowed me to accept that every single duty would not be finished in the span of a day. But that it would also be okay. That it would get done.

So, even if you have to save the entire world before the close of business today, consider that it’s only morning. That there is still time. That you are still very much capable. That you will overcome the hurdle.

Josh Alex Baker is a recent graduate of social work at Alabama A&M University, where he is now pursuing the Master of Social Work degree.

Champion Game Plan for Life

“MAKING COMPARISONS”

Matthew 20:12-15: one of the hired men said to the landowner, “These who were hired last, worked only one hour and you have made them equal to us who have borne the burden of the work and the heat of the day.” But the landowner answered one of them saying, “I am not being unfair to you, friend. Didn’t you agree to work for one denarius? Take your pay and go. I want to give the one who was hired last the same as I gave you. Don’t I have the right to do whatever I want with my money? Or are you envious because I am generous?”

Does it ever feel like to you that life is not fair? As we read here in the text, we see that God blesses whoever He wants to bless and there is no rhyme or reason to it. But the problem that so many of us have is we try to look at the fairness of it all. For example, how many of us felt like those who worked the longest should have been paid the most. Let’s face it, most of us see life from our own limited experiences and our own perceptions. So, when we feel that life is not fair, perhaps we need to look at the reason we feel that way. I believe that one of the reasons we feel that life is not fair is because of “comparisons”. In other words, we are constantly comparing ourselves to other people. This is a trap by the enemy. He will always make you feel like what you did or what you have is not enough. I pray that you don’t fall into this trap. Now there is nothing wrong with trying to aspire to be like someone else, but that is completely different from the parable that is being explained in this scripture. When we make comparisons, that will keep us from the blessings that God wants us to have. Also our pride will make us feel like life is not fair. Pride has always been the “downfall” of man. The Pride of these hired workers made them feel like they were better than the people who worked for only an hour. Even though they agreed to the conditions and the pay. I believe that whenever we feel that life is not fair, we may need to check our perspective and ask God for wisdom in this area ... Stay encouraged, my brothers and sisters. Experience the 'Vibe' of Huntsville

There is a new vibration moving through the city of Huntsville right now and the movement responsible for this wave is R&B Vibes Live.

There was a void when it came to consistent Urban Music events catering to the growing Black professional population in Huntsville, but said void has been recognized, and real action is being implemented.

Instead of waiting for the next big act to come to town, R&B Vibes Live is in the business of creating them, and providing them with a professional platform.

The man at the helm of the ship is Ryan Felton, CEO and creator of the platform. With the work he has been producing, one can feel the community of musicians growing closer, leaning on each other for support, and fans are getting their fair share of above-average concerts.

The best thing about R&B Vibes Live is its support of local talent. Huntsville has a rich history of influencing the world of music for over a hundred years, even though these works are overshadowed at times by rockets and other Huntsville factors.

Ryan is keeping stages lit with events across town at venues such as Club Envy, The Camp, Sidetracks Music Hall, and Mango's Caribbean Cookhouse.

As Huntsville grows, there will be a large demand for live music events, with family friendly environments, creative listening spaces, making the moves of Ryan Felton, and team important to the community's future.

An Appetite for Ease

Genesis 13:10-11; 19:17-20

Marcus Aurelius was one of the five greatest emperors of Rome. He is quoted as saying, "The impediment to action advances action." He is also quoted as saying, "Such as are your habitual thoughts, such also will be the character of your mind; for the soul is dyed by the thoughts." That's just another way of saying, "As a man (person) thinks, so is he (are they)." Had Lot understood this, the trajectory of his life would have been different. He lived based on his appetite for ease. Therefore, when Lot was given the choice of which area of the land that he would move to, he "lifted his eyes" and saw a naturally irrigated and beautifully arrayed area that he believed was the best place to move. After all, he wouldn't have to build any watering systems or engage in any horticultural endeavors of planting trees and grass; it was all there. However, that area was Sodom and Gomorrah. Before God destroyed them, he sent angels to rescue Lot and his family and Lot was told to "Escape to the mountains." Lot's perpetual proclivity toward that which required less effort, landed him in Zoar, the little city. He did not understand the principle of impediments as being the way to advance him. Succumbing to the thoughts which had dyed his soul with that captive, corrosive color of mediocrity, he spent his final days in smallness rather than enjoying God in the mountains.

John Stallworth Hosts Final Golf Tournament

Friday, June 14, 2019
Huntsville, Alabama

Following years of raising scholarship money for student athletes at Alabama A&M University, the John Stallworth Foundation and its namesake, hosted its final golf tournament on Friday, June 14.

After many years of fundraising, the NFL Hall of Famer and Huntsville resident John Stallworth, along with his wife Flo, have supported 200 student athletes at Alabama A&M University with over $550,000 in scholarship support.

Thanks to his former NFL friends who come to Huntsville each year to support the foundation's signature golf tournament event hosted by John, an Alabama A&M alumnus, the list of NFL legends that have attended the event helped to bolster the efforts of the foundation.

Although this was the final golf tournament, John & Flo Stallworth have become philanthropic pillars in the greater Huntsville/Madison County community and staunch supports of Alabama A&M University, and their community focused endeavors will continue to help those in need.
