tremendous growth, and the governor typically uses this opportunity to discuss further development and progress, note event coordinators.

Through this event, the Chamber aims to help foster communication between Governor Ivey and large and small businesses as it helps north Alabama continue to grow.

80-Year-Old Columbus Day Rolls on in the Valley

Discoverer? Really? Charleton? Likely.

Whatever one's view on the man so often proudly credited for discovering America, it cannot be ignored that the very name likely carries with it as much disdain as pride.

Adding fuel to the disfavor of the day as a state-sponsored celebration of genocide, on August 30, the Los Angeles City Council voted 14-1 to kill Columbus Day and to rename it "Indigenous Peoples Day."

Other cities and states putting to death the now 80-year-old celebration include Seattle, Albuquerque, San Francisco, Denver and Alaska and Vermont.

From the Editor

Greetings, TVW Readers!

September is a busy month. This week we feature an article about the Masons. My dad was a Mason and two of my brothers are Masons. However, I never really understood what it was about. I just remember that once a month my dad would get ready to go to his Masonic meetings. Likewise, my mother was a member of the Eastern Stars. Likewise, I didn't know what that was either. My mother never learned to drive, so she would fetch a ride with one of the neighborhood women to her monthly Eastern Stars meetings. What I know is that they held it seriously and whatever they discussed at those meetings, we never knew.

I would liken my knowledge of Masons and Eastern Stars to fraternities and sororities or men and women who did not have to have college degrees. Some did and some did not. I know that you had to be invited and initiated, and they took their membership seriously. I believe it is wonderful that men and women who didn't even go to school, some who did not finish high school, and others who were college graduates had the opportunity to meet about like-minded causes to build comradery, brotherhood and sisterhood.

Nowadays, we find ourselves excluding and voting people in and out of 'stuff' because of their accomplishments, credentials and associations. However, it occurs to me that sometimes people have ample contributions to make simply based on their humanity.

When diverse organizations use society's definitions for qualifications, rather than one's earnest desire to serve, give and learn, we miss many wonderful opportunities to grow, achieve progress and excellence.

I am elated that the Masons are still doing excellent work in the community. We don't have to understand everything about someone or something to know that it is good. When we take the humble core and spirit of labor out--leaving only hierarchy, bureaucracy, personal power and influence--we end us doing the same thing to each other that others used to use to oppress us. There is no difference!

Although my dad was NOT a lot of things. He was a Mason and was honored by his affiliation. And, to my knowledge, he never attended school a day in his life. Change is good. I respect changes and have been a student of leadership and organizational behavior for over 30 years. The more I learn and the longer I live, the more I know that there are some things worth holding on to in life. Let me offer human decency, brotherly and sisterly love without condition of accomplishments and credentials, and kindness in our associations without regard to origin or destination. The farm I was reared on did not determine my path in life--it encouraged me to use the 'grit' I gained to make sure that I didn't return other than to visit.

Our past should not determine our future. We need to stop judging people based on who we think they are. Many times, it's the person in the mirror that we need to address. I'm doing some self-assessment. What about you?

Until next week ...

Dorothy

Washington in a Minute

Here are the top issues in Washington, D.C., this week:

1. The Senate resumed consideration of the annual FY 2018 Defense Authorization Act. A final vote was expected Monday -- despite disagreements among Senators on transgender troops, North Korea sanctions, and ending sequestration on defense spending when the budget caps are exceeded. In a surprise move on Friday, Senate Armed Services Committee Chair John McCain (R-AZ) announced that he was giving his support to a bill to prohibit the Pentagon from involuntarily separating or denying the re-enlistment of currently-serving transgender troops solely on the basis of gender identity--co-sponsored by Sens. Jack Reed (D-RI), Kirsten Gillibrand (D-NY) and Sen. Susan Collins (R-ME).

2. President Trump was in New York City Monday for meetings with foreign leaders leading up to his first-ever address to the United Nations on Tuesday, where he urged countries to come together to address grave dangers posed by nations such as North Korea and Iran. On Saturday, he will travel to Huntsville, Ala., to campaign for Sen. Luther Strange (R-AL), who on Sept. 26 will face former Alabama Chief Justice Roy Moore in a runoff election--and the latest polls show Moore with a big lead.

3. Politico is reporting that House Speaker Paul Ryan (R-WI) is forming a working group of moderate Republicans and immigration hard-liners to find a DACA solution that includes funding for the Mexican border wall (although the President has stated he has agreed not to demand the border wall as part of a deal to protect DACA). The next DACA deadline is October 5, when 150,000 DACA participants must renew their permits before the program is scheduled to end early next year. On September 5, Attorney General Jeff Sessions had announced the end of the DACA program for its 780,000 participants.

4. Last Friday, a federal judge in Illinois imposed a nationwide restraining order halting the Department of Justice's crackdown on so-called "sanctuary cities." U.S. District Judge Harry D. Leinenweber wrote in a 41-page opinion that Attorney General Jeff Sessions had probably exceeded his lawful authority when he imposed the new conditions on grant program recipients.

5. Last Wednesday, House Ways and Means Committee Chair Kevin

Brady (R-TX) announced that he would release more details on the GOP tax reform proposal on September 25 and further plans to introduce a tax bill -- in October--assuming that Congress passes a budget reconciliation bill for FY2018 to serve as the vehicle to move the bill through Congress.

6. In a last ditch effort to repeal Obamacare before the current FY 2017 reconciliation vehicle expires on September 30, Sens. Bill Cassidy (R-LA), Dean Heller (R-NV), Ron Johnson (R-WI) and Lindsey Graham (R-SC) have authored a bill to end Obamacare subsidies and Medicaid expansion payments and send the money to the states in block grant form (irrespective of how much money the states are currently spending on healthcare--meaning that states which have not expanded their Medicaid programs would get a financial windfall).

7. Last Friday, Sens. Kirsten Gillibrand (D-NY) and Lindsey Graham (R-SC) introduced a bill to establish the National Commission on Cybersecurity of U.S. Election Systems to study Russian meddling in the 2016 election and make recommendations on how to guard against such activity going forward.

8. Already facing an investigation by the Office of Inspector General for his use of an official government plane for an August 2017 Kentucky trip, which included viewing the solar eclipse from the roof of Fort Knox with his wife, Treasury Secretary Steve Mnuchin was the subject of an ABC News story last Wednesday reporting a separate incident in which he requested the use of a U.S. Air Force jet during his June 2017 honeymoon travel to France, Italy and Scotland (but the request was later withdrawn). 9. Today college presidents, deans, professors and board members gather in Washington for the White House Summit on Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs) -- a downsized version of the annual conference that some HBCU leaders wanted the administration to postpone all together. The agenda includes discussions on HBCU capital financing, improving institutional student outcomes, collaborating with the tech sector, challenges and opportunities in achieving the post-secondary degree attainment goals, and the implementation of the executive order on HBCUs that the President signed in February. The administration has tapped Johnathan Holifield to lead the White House Initiative on Historically Black Colleges and Universities. Holifield, a former NFL player, is an author, speaker and consultant.

Champion Game Plan for Life by Preston Brown

Psalm 91:1 says: "Whoever dwells in the shelter of the Most High will rest in the shadow of the almighty." When we look at the seat belts in a car, we don't necessarily notice how nice they look or what kind of fabric they are made of. We look at them and value them for the security that they provide. So, when we put our seatbelts on we expect them to protect us in the case of an accident. This is how it should be in our spiritual lives. When we put our hope and trust in God, it allows us to be secure in knowing that God will take care of us. When the storms of life are raging, we can have this blessed assurance that God is with us and He will be that bridge over troubled waters. But we have to remember that He didn't say that He would save us from the storms. He said that He would be with us in the storm. That should provide us with the comfort of knowing that He is always there. When God sent His one and only son to die upon a cross for the whole world, He became our shelter in the time of a storm. He became our security in the midst of trouble. All we have to do is accept Him and believe in Him, and he will bring security to our lives. Just like that seatbelt when we get into our cars. So, it's time to "buckle up" with God and dwell in the shelter of the Most High and let Him provide the peace and security that we need for our lives. Stay encouraged, my brothers and sisters!

Huntsville Mayor Tommy Battle will deliver the annual State of the City Address on Thursday, November 9, at Von Braun Center North Hall at 12 noon.

The City of Huntsville continues to thrive. It is the fastest growing major metro area in the state of Alabama and also ranks among the fastest growing cities in the Southeast.

This growth brings new people and possibilities, but it must be handled with forethought for development that will happen in the coming years.

The mayor will discuss Huntsville's achievements and his projections in regards to citizens, schools, and local businesses.

Individual tickets range from $35-$75. The Huntsville-Chamber of Commerce will close reservations on November 3.

St. Jude Support Links Diverse Groups

Various organizations from throughout the Tennessee Valley are coming together in as many ways to support St. Jude Research Children Hospital and in recognition of September as Childhood Cancer Awareness Month.

For instance, the local Students of National FLAG Program Ages 12-18 are taking the Student Research Initiative (SRI) for this cause in "We Won't Stop Finding Cures. Saving Children." Joyce Thomas is Blacks in Government (BIG) National FLAG Program Advisor of Huntsville.

The SRI is earnestly raising funds to support St. Jude's lifesaving mission of finding cures for children battling cancer and other life-threatening diseases, and it is urging Valley residents to help it achieve its fundraising goal by making a donation of any size by September 30.

Checks can be made payable to: St. Jude/ID 4686355. For additional information, contact Joyce Thomas at Ann Thomas Center, 250 Sun Temple Drive B2, Madison, Ala., (256) 714-9071.

Meanwhile, the entire AAMU community is being invited to take part in the St. Jude Walk/Run to End Childhood Cancer on Saturday, September 23, at Mount Zion Baptist Church on 228 Mt. Zion Road in Madison, Ala., from 8 a.m.-12 noon.

Students, faculty, staff and organizations from "The Hill" are encouraged to form teams and to sign up for the fundraiser. The campus participation goal is a minimum of 250 persons, says coordinator Monica Clarke.

The activity at Mt. Zion is just one of several across the nation that are being formed to raise funds and awareness. The funds raised also help to support the lifesaving mission of St. Jude Children's Research Hospital. Because of its ongoing widespread support, the hospital freely provides children needed treatment and offers housing and food to family members throughout their child's hospitalization.

OU Takes Stand for Justice

by Dr. Dedrick Blue

In the wake of the Charlottesville, VA, tragedy, School of Religion & Theology Dean Dedrick Blue led a bus delegation of 24 Oakwood University faculty, students, and ministers to Washington, D.C., recently to join an interfaith Minister's March for Justice.

The March, organized by the National Action Network, convened nearly 5,000 faith leaders in commemoration of the 54th anniversary of The Poor People's March on Washington in 1967.

Originally envisioned to call attention to voting rights and criminal justice reform, the event took on a spirit of healing as Christians, Jews and Muslims prayed for the end to hatred and bigotry in the United States.

Oakwood University was the only HBCU to bring an organized delegation to the event. Oakwood students marched carrying an OU banner and wore matching t-shirts. Noted for their decorum and dignity, they were interviewed by press from around the world.

The greatest impact was upon the students themselves as they listened to Civil Rights icon Jesse Jackson, Rev. Al Sharpton, leaders from the SCLC, the NAACP, and various organizations from around the country.

Timothy Keller's
"The Prodigal God"

This easy read provides a transformative explanation and examination of the Prodigal Son parable, beginning with the true meaning of the word prodigal.

Father and two sons are analyzed in the context of just why Jesus found it necessary to tell the story in the first place. The sons are symbolic of two groups of people often around Jesus--the lost and the self-righteous.
