'Walk for Freedom' Event Scheduled

A "Walk for Freedom" to bring awareness to human trafficking has been scheduled at Jones Farm Park (Four Mile Post Road) on Saturday, October 15, at 8 a.m.

The Huntsville team represents one of several groups in cities around the world who, also on October 15, will walk in a single file line holding posters and distributing flyers. The aim is to reach the local community and provide information about human trafficking and how to end it.

For additional information, e-mail help@humantraffickinghotline.org or call (888) 373-7888.

HGAA Hosting Annual Trunk or Treat

The 3rd Annual Trunk or Treat sponsored by the Hazel Green Athletic Association will be held Saturday, October 29, at Hazel Green (Ala.) Ball Park from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m.

In addition to (BYO) candy, organizers will provide hamburgers, hot dogs, BBQ sandwiches and chips. Prizes will also be awarded to the best trunk and costume. There will be raffles for adults. Decorate your car and hand out candy!

The park is located at 172 Carriger Road in Hazel Green, Ala.

Jerimy Stewart is the event coordinator.

THE VALLEY WEEKLY THE FAMILY "Cultivating Friendships"

"A true friend loves at all times." ~Proverbs 29:11~

"True friends are never apart, maybe in distance, but never in heart."

Friendship is one of the hallmarks of the human experience. It can be a source of encouragement, comfort and affirmation. At the same time, it can sometimes cause frustration, heartbreak or pain. It's critical to know the nature of the friendships in our lives.

The type of friendship we have with someone can change as we mature, travel and experience life changes. Some psychologists have categorized friendships into three types:

Confidants are the most precious friends. We are lucky to have two-three of these over the course of a lifetime.

- They are there for you, regardless to the situation.
- They love you unconditionally.
- They are constants in your life and do not abandon you when you need them most.

HESC Seeking Public Input

City leaders of Huntsville are focused on long-term successful gains for people who live, work and play in the community. This includes a watchful eye on Huntsville's natural and built environment.

Mayor Tommy Battle recently asked area leaders with interest and expertise in this area to form a committee and examine contributing factors to long-term environmental sustainability in metro Huntsville.

"Environmental challenges directly impact our quality of life," said Mayor Battle. "We want to continue promoting sustainable urban development that revitalizes community, keeps our air, water and land clean and provides economic and social benefits for all of our residents."

To gather public input in this process, the Huntsville Environmental Sustainability Committee (HESC) held a two-hour public meeting on Tuesday, October 11, at Campus No. 805.

Marie Bostick, committee chair and executive director of the Land Trust of North Alabama, said the committee's definition of environmental sustainability is focused on achieving a balance between a healthy environment and a thriving economy for present and future generations.

Following input from the meeting, HESC will also launch an online survey to gather more insights from Huntsville residents at HuntsvilleAL.gov/HESC.

IT IS NOT WISE TO COMPARE

In Matthew 20:12-15, one of the hired men said to the landowner, "These who were hired last, worked only one hour and you have made them equal to us who have borne the burden of the work and the heat of the day." But the landowner answered one of them saying, "I am not being unfair to you, friend. Didn't you agree to work for one denarius? Take your pay and go. I want to give the one who was hired last the same as I gave you. Don't I have the right to do whatever I want with my money? Or are you envious because I am generous?"

Does it ever feel like life is not fair? As we read this scripture, we see how God, who is represented as the landowner, shows favor to anybody he chooses to bless and there is no rhyme or reason to it. Because it's all about his grace and his mercy, and there is nothing we can do to make him love us more or less. So it doesn't matter how long we serve God, He treats us all the same, because that is the true nature of God. He loves all of us the same.

But the problem that so many of us have is that we try to look at the fairness of it all. For example, how many of us felt like those who worked the longest should have been paid the most? Let's face it, most of us see life from a worldly perspective, based on our own limited experiences. However, that is not how God sees things. So, whenever we feel that life is not fair, perhaps we need to look at the reason we feel that way.

I believe one of the reasons we feel that life is not fair is because of "comparisons". In other words, we are constantly comparing ourselves to other people. This is a trap by the enemy. He will always make you feel like what you did or what you have is not enough. 2 Corinthians 10:12 says, "We do not dare to classify or compare ourselves with some who commend themselves. When they measure themselves by themselves and compare themselves with themselves they are not wise." I pray that you don't fall into this trap.

When we make unfair comparisons, it will keep us from the blessings that God wants us to have. You see, these hired workers were comparing themselves among themselves and that was not wise. I believe that whenever we feel that life is not fair, we may need to check the way we are comparing ourselves with other people. Stay encouraged, my brothers and sisters.

CENSUS: Global Diversity Awareness Month

October is Global Diversity Awareness Month, according to the U.S. Census Bureau.

Earlier this year, Census Bureau Director Robert Santos wrote about the importance of diversity and Census Bureau data and how diversity and inclusion can serve as a catalyst for achieving excellence and advancing equity.

"It is critical that we capture complete and accurate data on our nation's people and our economy. In fact, that is our mission. These data are critical to understanding where we are in our progression toward improving the lives of all who reside in our nation. The bottom line is that everyone at the Census Bureau has a role in helping 'we the people' create a more perfect union.

"By accurately capturing the experiences and characteristics of the American people through our censuses, surveys, and other collections, we see the rich mosaic of who we are, our situations, our livelihoods, our needs, and our fortunes."

Director Santos also wrote about how diversity and inclusion can serve as a catalyst for achieving excellence and advancing equity.

"The data we produce at the Census Bureau directly impact society's ability to identify and address inequities, and to track improvements (or detriments) from policies that seek to dampen those inequities. We can perpetuate excellence through the lens of diversity and inclusion, providing an even more accurate portrait of our nation."

TVW Columnist's Upcoming Book Predicts next NBA Dynasty(s)

"the Son of Man did not come to be served, but to serve, . ."
- Matthew 20:28.

Friday, September 30 kicked off the preseason schedule for the NBA's 76th season.

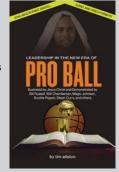

Three questions arise:

- How far will the 2022 finalist Boston Celtics progress without their year-long suspended coach Ime Udoka?
- Will 2023 break the 17-17 tie for most NBA titles between the Los Angeles Lakers and the Celtics? And
- Can the defending champion Golden State Warriors repeat and thus begin to create a new dynasty?

Based upon the NBA's first 75 years, its dynasties result from teams following the servant leadership model previously stated by Jesus Christ.

In training his 12-man team roster called "disciples," Coach Jesus stated, "the Son of Man did not come to be served, but to serve, . . ."

In NBA dynasty language, dynasties are made less by the top scorers ("being served") and more by those teammates that help scorers to score, those leaders from the middle; for example, these leaders from the middle provide the defensive rebounds, blocked shots, steals, and assists and are highlighted in the book's subtitle.

My upcoming fifth leadership book, Leadership in the New Era of PRO BALL, with the subtitle Illustrated by Jesus Christ and Demonstrated by Bill Russell, Wilt Chamberlain, Magic Johnson, Scottie Pippen, Kobe Bryant, Steph Curry, and others, chronicles the who, what, where, when, how, and why of not only past and current dynasties; it also predicts the model for future NBA dynasties.

My "research" actually began 56 years ago, . . .

... With a Four-point Play!

On that Saturday night, November 5, 1966, my uncles took this 12-year-old nephew to his first NBA game. Then and there at the Boston Garden, I scored a four-point play by witnessing:

- Defensive genius Bill Russell against offensive phenom Wilt "the Stilt" Chamberlain;
- The de-throning of one NBA champion and the eventual coronating of another;
- New player-coach Russell as the first Black manager in all American pro sports; and finally,
- How NBA dynasties result from following the servant leadership style of Jesus Christ.

Finally, if Jesus and the NBA met at center court for the jump ball, who would win the tip?

Be sure to get the book in April - the answer will surprise you. $\,$

AAMU Artificial Intelligence Lab Gets Boost from Army

The College of Engineering, Technology and Physical Sciences (CETPS) at Alabama A&M University has received yet another financial boost of confidence in its two-yearold Laboratory for Deep Learning (LDL) from the Army Research Office (ARO).

If artificial intelligence (AI) is the wave of the future, then it's cowabunga for a team of electrical engineering professors, who work consistently to ensure that AAMU students receive the best equipment for hands-on learning. The top-notch equipment made possible by an additional ARO award of $384,605 will enable students and researchers to keep cranking out new insights.

Back in 2020, Dr. Kaveh Heidary and Dr. R. Barry Johnson set up the Laboratory for Deep Learning to enhance the engineering college's capabilities in the vast realm of artificial intelligence and machine learning. A prior ARO award of over $100,000 was utilized to purchase a hyperspectral camera that covered the visible spectrum and was the initial equipment in the LDL. Keeping up to par entailed building up pseudo visual perception capabilities and readying a lab to delve super-deep into the intricacies of how humans gain and use knowledge from imagery.

A year later, ARO awarded the duo's lab the first award of $206,782 to purchase a much-needed high-performance data processing and computing platform and a special hyperspectral camera capable of taking pictures in 165 color bands at the same time!

In addition, equipment is being purchased to provide the capability for faculty and students to design and fabricate Field Programmable Gate Array (FPGA) devices that enable the development of custom logic for rapid prototyping. FPGAs are perfectly suited for today's rapidly growing applications, such as custom computing, artificial intelligence, system security, 5G, factory automation, and robotics. This year, the lab received its second ARO award, and Dr. Raziq Yaqub joined the team.

Now, those needed visual perception capabilities, which AI and machine learning often sorely depend on, have been brought to fruition. A suite of high-performance, high-definition cameras covering the ultraviolet (UV) to the long-wave infrared (LWIR) have been purchased, along with gimbals and an industrialgrade drone to transport them. The ability to fly this suite of cameras will provide AAMU with a unique capability that already government and industry desire to utilize to create databases of imagery of a wide variety of things.

Heidary and his team realized early on that AI and machine learning (ML) research was postured for growing importance in such areas as health care, automobile manufacturing, agriculture, spacecraft systems, border control, and national security. Having quality imagery from the UV to the LWIR often is necessary to implement AI and ML in products and systems. Creating such imagery is a goal of the Laboratory for Deep Learning, and the investment of over $700,000 by the Army Research Office has, in part, made the LDL a reality.

"This one-of-a-kind laboratory will enable faculty to develop new education and research programs in imaging, autonomy, data science, and deep learning," explained Dr. Heidary. The clincher, though, is the lab's increasing ability to attract and educate students in programs of "strategic importance to our nation's economic and technological advantage and military preparedness."

In addition to improving AAMU's STEM pipeline, CETPS can further thrust into the limelight its newly established M.S. program in electrical engineering (MSEE), as well as equip researchers with the tools needed to pursue additional competitive research funding.

For additional information about the ARO grant and AAMU's AI capabilities, contact Dr. Kaveh Heidary, the Principal Investigator, at (256) 372-5587 or e-mail kaveh. heidary@aamu.edu.

Here are the happenings in Washington, D.C., this week:

1. ON THE FLOOR. The House and Senate will have no recorded votes until Monday, Nov. 14. The Senate convened Tuesday for one day to start debate on the "must pass" FY2023 Defense Authorization bill.

2. THE WHITE HOUSE. As he did last year, President Biden issued two (2) proclamations designating Monday's federal holiday as Columbus Day and Indigenous Peoples' Day. On Wednesday, the President traveled to Leadville, CO, to designate the World War II training site Camp Hale as a National Monument (a favorite project of Sen. Michael Bennet, D-CO). He will then travel to California through Friday and then continue to Oregon through Saturday.

3. SUPREME COURT.
The Supreme Court
heard 4 cases this week, including on Tuesday the much-anticipated National Pork Producers Council v.
Ross as to whether a 2018
California animal rights ballot initiative, which established minimum space requirements based on square feet for egglaying hens, pigs used for breeding, and calves used for yeal, may prohibit the selling of animal products from farms outside the state that do not meet the minimum requirements. On Wednesday, the court will hear the noteworthy case of Andy Warhol Foundation for the Visual Arts, Inc. v. Goldsmith, which pits 74-year-old celebrity photographer Lynn Goldsmith against the Warhol Foundation, against whom she alleges copyright infringement by Warhol on a portrait she took of Prince in 1981 that he turned into his iconic "Orange Prince" (1984).

4. JAN. 6 COMMITTEE HEARING. The House January 6 Committee held its 9th hearing of the year (the 10th overall) on Thursday (Oct. 13) at 1 p.m., after the panel postponed its previously scheduled date of Sept. 28 because of the landfall of Hurricane Ian. Committee Chair Bennie Thompson (D-MS) announced that this hearing would not feature live witnesses but volunteered that it will provide "significant information" that has not yet been shown.

5. SEPTEMBER JOBS REPORT. Last Friday, the Department of Labor reported that nonfarm payrolls increased by 263,000 for September, which was fewer than the expected 275,000.

The unemployment rate was 3.5% versus the forecast of 3.7% as the labor force participation rate edged lower to 62.3% and the size of the labor force decreased by 57,000.

Average hourly earnings rose 5% on a year-over-year basis in September, down slightly from the 5.2% pace in August but still indicative of an economy where the cost of living is surging.

Hourly earnings rose 0.3% on a monthly basis, the same as in August. CNBC predicted that there is an 82% chance of the Federal Reserve raising interest rates by another 0.75-point in November, then a 0.5-point increase in December followed by a 0.25-point move in February.
