Community Mourns Death of District VI Commissioner

Funeral service for Commissioner Robert "Bob" Harrison was held on Wednesday, November 1, at Progressive Union Missionary Baptist Church, and Dr. Wayne P. Snodgrass officiated.

Harrison, 74, was born in North Little Rock, Ark., and attended Philander Smith College, a local historically black college.

He moved to Huntsville in 1968 and was effective in establishing a legacy of advocacy and service.

Throughout his career he was an innovator and entrepreneur, having owned the Bob Harrison Ford & Lincoln Mercury Dealership in Fayetteville, Tenn., among other successful business endeavors.

A consummate community activist, Harrison worked continuously to promote equality and justice prior to having been elected County Commissioner for District 6.

The Valley Weekly joins the local, state and national community in extending condolences to his loving wife, Dr. Izora Harrison, and his entire family.

Those who knew him will miss his numerous contributions to Huntsville and Madison County.

Valley Man Served as Community's Conscience

Many Valley residents are painfully aware of the death and sensitive to the life and active presence of a friend, Ralph Timberlake.

Originally from Paint Rock, he was affectionately called him "Mr. Timberlake - Sir" by many.

A veteran and licensed pilot, Timberlake was quick to point out that veterans need 'more' support and respect, that the poor and elderly should not be forgotten and, more importantly, that all of us who work and pay taxes contribute to the local, state and national budget; therefore, decision makers should consider those contributions when decisions are made.

Timberlake was eulogized at the Royal Chapel of Memories on October 27 by his brother, Rev. Michael R. Timberlake, with Elder Johnny Jones officiating.

He was buried at the National Cemetery in Chattanooga, Tenn. Family and friends, along with The Valley Weekly, will miss his ever-present, citizen-based economic, social and political advocacy and service.

Councilman Keith, Supporters Build Playground

On Friday, October 27, Councilman Devyn Keith (above with Michelle Gillingham Jordan), along with local businesses, City of Huntsville departments and volunteers, built a playground at the Calvary Hills Community Center.

A crowd of donors and volunteers joined Keith for the one-day feat, from start to finish. When The Valley Weekly stopped in, much of the building and assembly were completed and volunteers were getting ready to lay sod.

Councilman Keith has demonstrated very early his ability to organize local citizens with "good grit" to get things done in North Huntsville.

Here are the top issues in Washington, D.C., for the week of October 30:

1. The House and Senate are in session this week. The big news on Capitol Hill this week was the rollout of the comprehensive tax reform bill on Wednesday by House Ways and Means Committee Chair Kevin Brady (R-TX). On Monday afternoon and all-day on Tuesday, Ways and Means GOP Members will meet to discuss final details before introducing the tax reform text. According to senior Hill staff, the bill includes the following (although these provisions are subject to change and are not an exhaustive list):

3 new individual tax rates of 12, 25 and 35%
Doubles the standard deduction to $12,000 for single filers and $24,000 for married couples (but gets rid of the personal exemption and the per dependent exemption of $4,500)

Lowers the corporate tax rate to 20%

Lowers to 25% the tax rate on "pass-through" income from partnerships, S corporations, and sole proprietorships

Elimination of all deductions, except the mortgage interest and charitable deductions (state and local tax deduction may be preserved for property taxes but not income or sales taxes)

Repeals the alternative minimum tax

Preserves the current capital gains tax rate

Doubles the estate tax exemption from $12 to $24 million

NOTE: a decision on whether to limit 401(k) contributions seems to be still in play.

2. On Monday, President and Mrs. Trump handed out candy and cookies from the White House kitchen on the South Lawn to local children and children of military families for Halloween. This week, the President is expected to name the new head of the Federal Reserve (current Chair Janet Yellen's term expires in February). Reportedly, he has narrowed his choice to 2 people -- Fed Governor Jerome Powell and Stanford economist John Taylor.

According to CNBC, Taylor is most well-known for developing a rule that specifically lays out where the Fed's benchmark rate should be and according to the "Taylor Rule," the funds rate should be closer to 3 percent than the current level of 1.15 percent.

Starting this Friday, (Nov. 3) through Nov. 14, the President will travel to Japan, South Korea, China, Vietnam, the Philippines, and Hawaii. While in Asia, he will participate in the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) meeting and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) summit.

3. Last Friday, it was reported that a federal grand jury approved the first criminal charges from Special Counsel Robert Mueller's Russia investigation and that we could learn the identity of anyone charged as soon as Monday. On Thursday, former Trump campaign adviser Carter Page will testify before the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence in an "open hearing in a closed space," which means that no press or public will be present, but that his testimony will be unclassified and that the transcript could be released in the future.

4. In news on the Fiscal Year 2018 appropriations cycle (the federal government is currently operating under a stopgap measure that expires on Dec. 8), Republicans and Democrats on Capitol Hill reportedly are quietly negotiating to raise the 2011-enacted budget caps, so that the GOP can raise defense spending this year by $70 billion and avoid deep cuts to non-defense programs. Without a deal, most observers believe it will be impossible to finish work on the 12 appropriations bills and avoid another continuing resolution when the current stopgap expires on Dec. 8 or, worse, a government shutdown. Without any changes, the 2011 Budget Control Act currently requires regular discretionary spending to drop by about $5 billion this year.

5. Higher Learning Advocates, a new organization aimed at reforming federal higher education policy, is unveiling its first policy framework today during an event at the National Press Club. The agenda is focused on boosting "high-quality" outcomes and making higher education more affordable and responsive to the needs of students and employers. Among the policy recommendations: push accreditors to focus more on student outcomes; allow for a "student level data system" to improve data about colleges' performance; and open up federal student loans and Pell Grants to "high-quality approved non-institutional providers of postsecondary training, including apprenticeships and employer-based training."

6. On Monday, Secretary of State Rex Tillerson and Secretary of Defense James Mattis testified before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on whether there is a need for a new congressional authorization to fight ISIS. The current authorization was approved in 2001 after the 9/11 attacks, before ISIS existed. On Thursday at 10 a.m., the House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee hosted a hearing on "Emergency Response and Recovery: Central Takeaways from the Unprecedented 2017 Hurricane Season."

Champion Game Plan for Life

by Preston Brown

In Luke 18:18, a certain ruler asks him, Good teacher, what must I do to inherit eternal life? Jesus answers in verse 22: Sell everything that you have and give to the poor, and you will have treasures in heaven. You know, one of the things that we have to realize is that in this life there is always going to be a cost for everything that we do, but there are also rewards. For example, if we want to have a healthy relationship with someone, then we need to spend quality time with that person. So, your reward will be a satisfying relationship. If you want to get in shape or lose weight, you have to give up certain foods and perhaps "work-out" more, but your reward will be a healthy body. And, the same can be said in our spiritual lives.

There is a cost for following Jesus, but He also provides us with a reward. That reward is eternal life. Now, being a disciple of Jesus Christ is more than just being forgiven or just coming to church. Being a disciple is the process of moving toward spiritual adulthood. It's conducting yourself in such a way that others can see the good works that God is doing in your life. But it all comes with a price. We have to watch what we say and watch what we do and watch how we live. You see, we may have to pay a price, but God offers a reward. That reward comes from growing in the knowledge of God. So, what must we do to be a follower of Jesus Christ? We need to continue to grow spiritually and believe in the one that God sent.

Stay encouraged, my brothers and sisters.

Ahhh ... It's Magic!

Blessings for a wonderful week. October is gone and November is here. There is much to do and places to go. People wonder why we stay so busy, and the most genuine answer is because we love people. Sometimes we rant about what appear to be the small things in life--but, they are many times the things that matter. Let's ride.

Last Friday, we participated in the Birmingham Bicentennial Kick-Off Ceremony in the downtown historic theatre district. The theme was "I'm Coming Home." This ceremony was part of a three-year celebration leading up to the State of Alabama's bicentennial on December 14, 2019.

Chaired by AAMU alumnus Dr. Henry Panion, III, the ceremony presented the AAMU, Alabama State and UAB marching bands playing together to pre-launch the program.

We had the opportunity to see and hear Lee Sentell, formerly of Huntsville's Convention and Visitor's Bureau, in his current role as Director of the Alabama Department of Tourism and Vice-Chair of the Alabama Bicentennial Commission. Dr. Leah Rawls Atkins, a Birmingham historian and author, presented a compact history of the contributions Birmingham and Jefferson County have made to the state. Dr. Lee Whitmore, Executive Director of the Grammy Music Education Coalition, made a special announcement regarding planned work throughout the state to enhance the 4th grade curriculum to include music, beginning with Title 1 schools.

Alright, Huntsville, what are we doing and how can we get involved in the Alabama 200 Bicentennial celebration? We have led and are leading in so many ways. We must ensure that our contributions are celebrated and documented as part of this once-in-a-lifetime project. Regardless to how we take advantage and participate in it, history is being made. None of us reading this today will be here for the tricentennial! Thank you, Dr. Henry Panion, for including your Huntsville family and friends in this wonderful weekend, which culminated in a concert with The Temptations Review featuring one of the original Temptations (Dennis Edwards), Jennifer Holliday, Bo Brice, Ruben Studdard and you and your orchestra.

The weather impacted the attendance at the Magic City Classic football game; however, the Birmingham news outlets reported over 50,000 fans inside the game--not counting thousands of the tailgaters, vendors and fans who just hang-out--along with sororities, fraternities, clubs, family and friends--for the fellowship and camaraderie stitched together via music, food, spirits, brew and apparel. Alabama State took an early lead in the game and secured a victory in the end. But, the A&M Marching Maroon and White were unusually strong, contributing a win by everyone involved. Enjoy last week's scenes captured by TVW on Page 4.

Back to Huntsville.

Congratulations, entrepreneur Cathy Anderson, Ford Director-Owner and Dealer, on Wednesday's expansion and grand opening of the expanded Woody Anderson Ford dealership at the corner of Jordan Lane and Sparkman Drive. We are proud to have you in North Huntsville. Thank you for the many, many contributions you have made in our community. Each day, you continue to demonstrate your leadership and ingenuity as a servant, leader, game-changer and woman with human dignity and respect. You added a point of light to the history of Huntsville on Wednesday, November 1, 2017. Blessings for continued success!

Live, love, enjoy and contribute! Until next week ...

AAMU Board Elects Officers in Birmingham

The members of the Alabama A&M University Board of Trustees went through an ambitious agenda in Birmingham Friday, October 27, that dealt with the renewal of a line of credit, election of officers and other action items from the University's business and academic units.

The Board elected Dr. Jerome B. Williams of Birmingham as President Pro Tem, and Trustee Chris Robinson (Huntsville area) will serve as Secretary. Members of the Board's new Executive Committee include Trustees Kevin Ball, Ginger Harper, John Hackett Jr., and Chris Robinson.

As part of action items submitted under Academic Affairs unit, the Board approved a review of the University's Mission Statement (formalizing the appropriateness of the Mission Statement in compliance with the accrediting body); the addition of a master's program in electrical engineering; a request to divest the AAMU/University of

North Alabama campus social work off-site program; and the termination of the Center for Global Service Research.

The Board approved the renewal of a line of credit in the amount of $6.5 million; a room fee for the new 580-bed residence hall facility which opens in January 2018 ($3,550-single; $3,000-double); and an amendment to the operating agreement between AAMU and the AAMU

Foundation, which manages the University's endowment and investments.

SGA President Julian Griffith-Battle reported numerous activities and volunteerism efforts sponsored by the organization, including student elections, Homecoming 2017, Habitat for Humanity campaign, and Magic City Classic.

The Board's next regular Meeting will be Friday, March 2.

Chicago Alumni Sponsor Bus Tour: Alumnus Dr. Charles Cannon (r) and members of the Chicago Alumni Chapter of the AAMU National Alumni Association were greeted to the campus by local alumni James Garner and Idella Rainey (left). Rainey, a long-time resident of Chicago, relocated to Huntsville several years ago. High schoolers and parents from Chicago were not only greeted by Garner and Rainey, but currently enrolled students from Chicago met them in the VIP Room of the Ernest Knight Center for breakfast and a tour of the campus, followed by their annual adventure to the Magic City Classic in Birmingham.
