Flipping the List in Westside Huntsville

Over a year ago, the staff from The CornerStone Initiative (a non-profit in Huntsville committed to the practice of Christian Community Development in Westside/35805) heard David Spickard, from Jobs for Life, speak about a crazy idea ... "Flipping the List." David encouraged some conference attendees to consider the fact that the majority of "mission dollars"

Church, Westside Community Church, Cumberland Church Street Presbyterian Church and the Huntsville Housing Authority to host classes where men and women are prepared for sustainable employment. Jobs for Life (JFL) is a 32-hour employment preparation class that focuses on soft skills through a Biblically based curriculum that develops good character, years of experience and lessons learned, and volunteers who assist in resume building, interview skills, and job searches. Volunteers from the collaborative organizations provide not only childcare and hot meals for each class, but create an atmosphere where the students are served and given the opportunity to eat and fellowship with their champions and teachers. By the end of the 16 classes, the JFL team becomes more of an extended family and you can sense it at the graduation ceremony! Graduation is a huge event celebrated by friends and family of the students. Stories are shared about the "butterfly effect" as so many witness the "transformation" of their class members.

While CornerStone and the JFL team make it clear from the beginning that they do not "guarantee" a job at the end, that has not stopped them from developing a Business Network team that actively seeks out businesses in Madison County that are willing to give JFL students a chance. Businesses are now contacting CornerStone and asking for JFL grads!

On November 18, JFL hosted its second graduation and saw nine more strong men and women enter or re-enter the work force. For more information on how to get involved, e-mail the director, Debbi Akers at debbi.akers@cornerstone-al.org.

self-confidence and dependable work ethics. What sets JFL apart is the mentorship and supportive community that each student receives. Every student is paired with a "champion" that undergoes one month or more of training to learn how to be a huge encouragement to their student. Not only does the champion go to the weekly classes with the student, but they also connect throughout the week through phone calls, texts, lunch meetings, etc., to work together for the student's success. When the 8-week class ends, the relationship does not. Each champion enters the relationship committing to seek ways to encourage their student for at least one year.

Throughout the class, the students are exposed to teachers who invest in their lives, businessmen and women from the community who pour into them from their

in American churches go to projects that provide food, clothing, shelter and utility assistance to people in need. "Less than 2% of our mission dollars," said Spickard, "go to efforts that prepare individuals for sustainable jobs."

The beautiful and simple question that he posed was, "What if we flipped the list?"

That question resonated in the ears of the CornerStone team as they moved ahead in their mission of restoring hope in the lives of their friends in Westside. Prayer teams began to pray and God began to reveal a team of people ready to get involved in the Jobs for Life dream.

After prayer, collaboration is one of the key methods that CornerStone uses in addressing issues related to poverty. Today, they are partnering with Southwood Presbyterian

'Shop With a Hero' Targets School Kids

Shop With a Hero will partner with Walmart and local businesses to help provide Christmas to "at risk" children in the Huntsville/Madison County school systems on December 10.

The organization is looking for "heroes" school administrators.

Each hero will be paired with a child and a $100 gift card to allow kids to shop in select local stores for themselves and their families.

MPI Data Sheds Light on Naturalization

According to the non-partisan Migration Policy Institute (MPI), of the individuals who naturalized in 2014, 15 percent were born in Mexico (94,889); roughly 6 percent in India (37,854); and 5 percent, the Philippines (34,591). Immigrants from the three, along with those from China (30,284), Cuba (24,092), Dominican Republic (23,775), Vietnam (18,837), Colombia (16,478), El Salvador (15,598), and Haiti (13,676), made up the top 10 countries of birth for newly naturalized citizens and accounted for 47 percent of the 653,416 new U.S. citizens that year.

In 2014, 54 percent of the newly naturalized lived in one of four states:

California, which had the largest number of newly naturalized citizens, Florida, New York and Texas.

Your Washington Recap

Here are the top issues in Washington, D.C., this week:

1. The House and Senate return to session this week. In addition to 29 bills on its suspension calendar (requiring a 2/3rds "yea" vote to pass), the House will take up a bill to roll back a piece of 2010's Dodd-Frank financial reform bill by changing the regulation of financial institutions to a standard based on risk rather than on arbitrary asset size - which is seen as easing the regulatory burden on smaller banks ... The House and Senate leadership will also be working this week to finalize the details on a temporary funding plan (known as a "continuing resolution") to fund the federal government at FY2016 levels through March 31, 2017. The current CR expires on December 9.

On Wednesday (Nov. 30), House Democrats were slated to elect their leader for the next Congress, pitting Rep. Tim Ryan (D-OH) against 7-term Democratic Leader Nancy Pelosi

(D-CA).

2. On Sunday, the Politico site reported that as many as 98 final regulations under review at the White House could be implemented before Donald Trump takes office, of which 17 awaiting final approval are considered "economically significant," with an estimated economic impact of at least $100 million a year - including regulations on commodities speculation, air pollution from the oil industry, doctors' Medicare drug payments, high-skilled immigrant workers and debt relief to students at defunct for-profit colleges. In a letter to all federal agency heads on Nov. 15, House Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy (R-CA) cautioned them against finalizing pending rules or regulations in the Administration's last days.

3. President-elect Trump announced Betsy DeVos as his pick for Secretary of Education last week.

4. Members of Congress expect to hear more details as early as this week about President-elect

Donald Trump's proposal to make a $1 trillion investment in infrastructure over the next 10 years. Republicans seem generally supportive of the overall proposal. Top Democrats, including incoming Senate Minority Leader Charles Schumer and House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi, also initially appear supportive. In contrast, Senator Bernie Sanders, who has been appointed to the Senate Democrats' leadership team, recently criticized the plan as a "scam" that would give massive tax breaks to corporations. Senator Sanders said he will introduce his own five-year, $1 trillion infrastructure plan at the start of the 115th Congress that would directly fund roads, bridges and public works.

5. On Sunday, incoming White House Chief of Staff Reince Priebus, commenting on Friday's demise of Cuba's Fidel Castro, said Donald Trump is willing to reverse the opening of diplomatic relations with Cuba, unless he sees "movement in the right direction" from the Cuban regime on open markets, freedom of religion, and political prisoners.

6. On Friday, Green Party candidate Jill Stein, having raised more than $6.2 million since last Wednesday, filed for a recount in Wisconsin and has raised funds for similar efforts in Michigan and Pennsylvania.

From the EditorAn Award Winner ... Ah, Thanks!

Two weeks ago, The Valley Weekly was honored by the National Coalition of 100 Black Women with one of the organization's "Women of Change" awards. According to the citation, this recognition was earned based on:

[Our] "time and dedicated service to our community and the outstanding work that you do to promote a sense of connection, pride and appreciation in communication. Your efforts have helped bring about greater awareness in the community and have notably shed light on the many important achievements. With our deepest respect for your commitment, best wishes for continued success. The Greater Huntsville Area Chapter of the National Coalition of 100 Black Women, Incorporated, honor you for your exemplary work and your accomplishments."

Thank you, Dr. Deidra Willis, president, and Ms. Valerie Burrell, vice president for membership, for such a signal honor. When Mrs. Mary Turner called me to notify me about this award for TVW, I immediately indicated to her that we did not need an award. She went on to indicate that our paper had earned the award for the positive, inspirational and educational work we do in this community. When someone else decides that the work you are doing is worthy of recognition, that is one of the greatest honors one can receive. It was not expected or suggested by anyone associated with our paper. So, thanks again to the ladies of the National Coalition of 100 Black Women for the pleasant surprise. Believe it or not, you have made us an award-winning paper! That's pretty darn good for a group of volunteers who decided over two years ago that we could publish something that represents the positive in our community.

Happy December! December is not only a time when we as Christians celebrate the birth of Our Lord and Savior. For Bill and me, we are celebrating our 35th Anniversary. That's quite a long time for a couple of mismatched young professionals who met at Second Baptist Church in Columbus, Ohio. Bill was a city guy, with educated parents who had taken a teaching assignment in the area. I was a Southern country girl, straight from the farm, who took my first flight when I left Huntsville to land in Columbus for graduate school at Ohio State. Columbus was very generous to me. I gained a Christian husband, earned two graduate degrees from Ohio State, and gave birth to our first son there. In addition, I was able to jump-start a successful career in higher education, having worked at Ohio Wesleyan University (OWU) for four years--some of my most productive and maturing years as a young professional. OWU was a nurturing environment that provided me with opportunities to learn, fail, grow and succeed--all at the same time. We tried a lot of novel things, learned a lot of valuable lessons and appreciated the local, small-town, liberal arts culture that thrust us into a wonderful community of people and spaces that have created life-long memories with loving family and friends.

We wish for each of our readers a dazzling December! We hope to see you around town soon. Blessings until next week ...

Raising Awareness to Cure Lupus

I appreciate all those who dedicate their lives to saving lives. The nurses, doctors, dentists, nutritionists, scientists, surgeons, and all of those in the healthcare industry. It takes a strong, gentle person to care for the sick and shut-in. November 16th would have been the 33rd birthday of my cousin, Shayla Savage. She passed earlier this year from Lupus. Even though she had a disease which brought her great pain, she worked everyday as a nurse for our family physician. She graduated from The University of Alabama in Huntsville, which has one of the top nursing programs, and devoted her life to healing and helping others. It takes a significant amount of dedication to become a professional in healthcare or receive a Doctor of Philosophy degree (PhD). It truly takes a special kind of person to save lives and to work in the medical field. In honor of my cousin, I want to do my part in helping to possibly save someone's life by raising awareness for lupus, the horrible disease which took her life at the tender age of 32.

Cure

part of the body (skin, joints, and/or organs inside the body). Our research estimates that at least 1.5 million Americans have lupus. More than 16,000 new cases of lupus are reported annually across the country. It is believed that 5 million people throughout the world have a form of lupus. Lupus strikes mostly women of childbearing age (15-44). Women of color are two to three times more likely to develop lupus than Caucasians. However, men, children, and teenagers develop lupus, too." (www.lupus.org). Unfortunately, there is no cure for lupus; however, there are treatments and medications to improve the quality of life for those living with lupus. I pray that one day someone who has dedicated their life to medicine, finds the cures for cancer and horrible diseases, such as lupus, which alters the quality of life and can take a life. I truly do appreciate those who answer the calling to be healers, such as doctors, pharmacists, nurses, dentists, and more. If you are like me, and weren't given that gift from God, you can take part in saving lives by raising awareness and supporting charities that research the development of treatment and cures. You don't have to be in the medical field to save a life.

As entrepreneurs, it is important that we utilize our resources or platform by donating and raising awareness for illnesses and issues that affect our community. Just as we have to promote our businesses in order for them to seek revenue and results; it's important that we raise awareness for causes, especially those that hit close to home. Donating and writing charity checks is helpful; however, raising awareness takes it a step further because it gets more people involved to support the cause. You don't have to have a platform or million dollar company to raise awareness. One simple social media post or conversation with someone informing them about the disease and inspiring their help, has just as big of an impact as the doctors treating these diseases. You can inspire others to get tested or take on healthy lifestyles to prevent certain cancers and diseases by raising awareness.

A Good Read by Jerome Saintjones

William Henry Lewis’ “Shades”

One very hot summer day at an annual blues festival in a small Southern town, a mother points out to her son the father he had never seen.

Throughout the son’s fourteen years, his mother had not spoken much of his father, except to tell him about how the man she loved had come home drunk one night, had his way with her and then left on a train for the North, leaving his sweaty work shirt on the bedpost.

The father had not returned to her and probably did not know that, in addition to leaving a woman who loved him, he had left a child.

At first, the boy watches his father from a distance, as his dad appears to be the cool leader of a pack of men intent on having a good time on their quick pass through their hometown.

His curiosity gets the best of him, so the boy works his way through the crowd and gets the attention of the man who was his father in every realm but inside the father’s head.

The boy is perfectly willing to accept his father as he is, but his father is called away to other adventures (“We got ladies waiting!”) by his buddies. Before his father leaves, he gives the boy his shades.

As though possessed by a thought, he looks beyond the boy, the crowd and the railroad tracks, as though pushed to recall that final night when he forced himself on a woman who loved and believed in him, perhaps leaving a part of himself behind.

Champion Game Plan for Life

Unbelief leads to disobedience. When you don't believe what God tells you to do, through the promptings of the holy spirit, you will end up being disobedient.

You see, the Israelites never really believed that God would take care of them. If you feel the same way, you will always end up disobeying what God wants you to do.

There is nothing that God tells us to do that is for Him ... it's always for us. Everything that He tells us to do is so our lives can be better.

So, anything that He ask us to go through, there will be a "purpose" for us to get out of it. Even though it may seem difficult at the time.

Stay encouraged, my brothers and sisters!

AAMU Freshmen Harvest Community Garden

The Alabama Cooperative Extension System's Urban Affairs and New Nontraditional Programs in collaboration with Huntsville's Operation Green Team and students from the Office of Service and Learning, Communities and Volunteerism, and the Office of Student Affairs at Alabama A&M University recently harvested a community garden at Crawford Park.

The garden was implemented with building materials, seeds, and education from Alabama Extension's Home Grounds, Gardens, and Home Pests team members Rudy Pacumbaba, a horticulture specialist, and regional Extension agents Rhonda Britton and Marcus Garner.

The Crawford Park garden is one of several community garden projects established this year by Alabama Extension and partners.

Urban Affairs and New Nontraditional Programs, a unit of the Alabama

Cooperative Extension System, is housed in the James I. Dawson Building on the AAMU campus and provides urban Extension programming to Alabama citizens across the state.

Find them on Facebook at <https://www.facebook.com/ACESUrbanAffairsUnit/>.

For more information regarding urban gardening, contact Rudy Pacumbaba at (256) 372-4266 or rop0001@aces.edu.

Remembering Dr. Carodine

The Tennessee Valley community is mourning the recent passing and funeral of one of its most revered pioneers and Rosetta James Foundation Elders.

Born in Tuscaloosa, Ala., Dr. Frederick Carodine, Sr., was a 1951 mechanic arts (printing) graduate of Alabama A&M University. After a stint working in Nashville, Tenn., the veteran returned to AAMU, where President Joseph Fanning Drake urged him to continue his studies at Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo.

Dr. Carodine also helped S.C. O'Neal open J.F. Drake State Technical College and worked at the school through the mid-1960s, in addition to operating his own printing shop.

His impressive career at Redstone Arsenal began when "someone else" filed an employment application for him for a job in data reduction and analysis.

Dr. Carodine, who ultimately achieved the level of GS-14, had to learn the job. He conducted complex positioning space data and recorded statistics from the point of missile launch to target impact, along with data on pitch and altitude.

Over the years, Carodine would play a key role in the Knight-Sims higher education segregation lawsuit, the Alabama Democratic Conference, Masons and Rural Senior Services.

for a bright future fueled by a rich history.
